

Alexis Ahlstrom

Alexis Ahlstrom is a Director at Avalere Health, LLC. She specializes in Medicare financing policy and data analytics. She is currently conducting research on the potential creation of a regulatory pathway for follow-on biologics. This research has led to the development of an analytic framework for assessing the impact of follow-on biologics on public and private health care spending.

Prior to joining Avalere Health, Alexis spent three years at the Congressional Budget Office estimating the budgetary impact of legislation on Medicare providers and services. While at the CBO, she built and analyzed models to project spending in Medicare inpatient hospital and hospice settings, to estimate the effect of health legislation on federal tax revenues, and to predict expenditures in the FEHB program.

Alexis holds an undergraduate degree and a Masters of Public Health from the University of Michigan.
