

John H. Turco, M.D.

Biographical Sketch

Dr. Jack Turco is Director of the Dartmouth College Health Service and a specialist in endocrinology at the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center. A resident of Norwich, Vermont, he is a native of Melrose, Massachusetts.

Dr. Turco attended Harvard College where he graduated with honors. He received his M.D. degree from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia in 1974. He completed his internship and residency program at the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center in 1979.

Dr. Turco joined the clinical staff at the Hitchcock Clinic in 1979 and continues as an endocrinologist in the Endocrinology and Metabolism Section. He is an Associate Professor of Medicine at Dartmouth Medical School. Dr. Turco has been the Director of the Dartmouth College Health Service since in 1981. His interests include college health, diabetes, thyroid disease, and endocrine aspects of transgender issues.